

PRESS RELEASE

4 September 2020

Comexposium Group, the organiser of the trade show ALL4PACK, today announces the postponement to 2022 of its 2020 edition, initially scheduled for this November

Since the outbreak of the Covid-19 pandemic, everyone in the ALL4PACK team has remained strongly mobilised to support companies and provide them with this much-awaited springboard for economic recovery. To enable such an international event to be held during a period of pandemic, a great many initiatives were planned to guarantee not only individual and collective safety but also the quality of business dialogue and discussions surrounding the challenges that lie ahead for packaging.

However, in view of the current public health trend and more broadly the development of the coronavirus crisis and its consequences and given that many companies have begun to reintroduce travel restrictions, ALL4PACK has been rescheduled to November 2022.

Despite this underlying crisis, ALL4PACK will continue to fulfil its role as a source of inspiration for the future through its analysis and insight into innovations and regulations, and as a business facilitator.

“Remaining true to our mission, our intention is to remain in contact with the profession and support the business recovery and transformation of packaging and intralogistics market players. At each edition, we decipher the market and the trends in the packaging sector, and we have continually reinvented ourselves throughout the 70 years of the show’s existence. During these quite exceptional times, agility is essential. We are keen to keep our promise to support economic recovery in the industry. As such, we will offer new meetings and events from November 2020 onwards, based on the major challenges of the current and future regulatory environment, trends and innovations that are shaping the future of the packaging industry,” explains Olivia Milan, Director of ALL4PACK.

In parallel, the team is beginning to make preparations for a renewed and effective ALL4PACK 2022.
